PERSPECTIVE

Lebanon Valley is

— a special kind of loving:

Going from day to day moving always upward

— Remembering

Then changing, hoping for the sun.

— A source of new life together

— Growing close, becoming a part
Reaching out for others.

Four years for experiencing

Searching

Taking what you want.

Then looking back,
asking

What is Lebanon Valley?

Lebanon Valley College takes a giant step forward with the long awaited College Center which has become an integral and functional part of the campus. It is more than a building; it is an organization and program sensitive to the needs of each person. It is a unifying force which allows the commuters, residents, and faculty a place for informal associations outside the classroom. Included in the College Center are a reception hall and lobby, a main lounge, two dining halls plus the President's dining hall, a conference room and a theater on the main floor. Below are the music listening lounge, the snack shop, the TV lounge, the college store, the game room, offices, and activities rooms.

The director of the College Center is Mr. Walter Smith. He, along with the College Center Advisory Committee, establishes the policy for the Center in an attempt to make it the hub of campus life.

To the Editor:

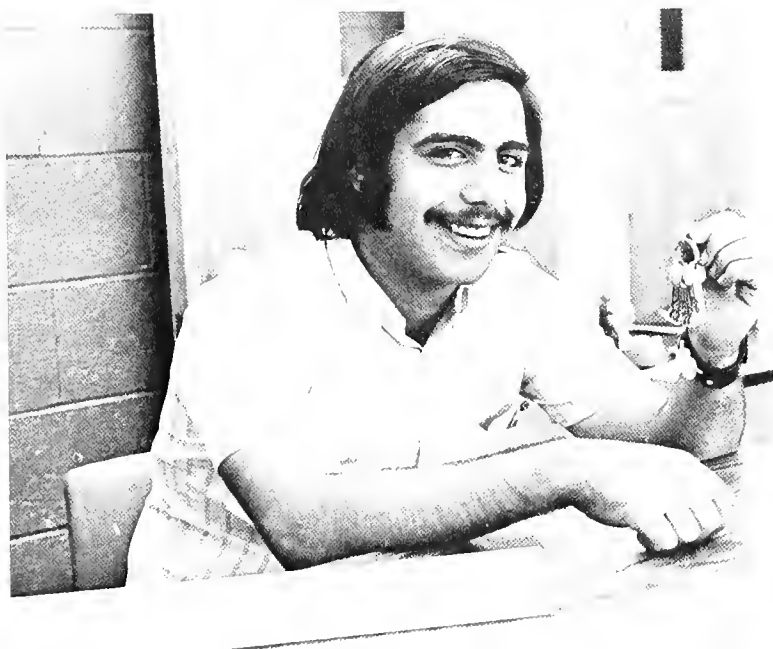

Our feelings toward the Student Center are principally negative. However, there are some positive points, such as there is finally a building, which has basically a decent appearance except for the O. K. Corral. But the O. K. Corral is fitting as Wyatt Earp marshalls the activity within. Also a positive point is the game room with beautiful pay tables which would have been free to use except for the fact that a corral had to be erected to keep Wyatt's horses in and the Indians, and wild animals, traditionally a problem, out.

So much for the positive aspects. Now, we can critically examine Wyatt's headquarters. First of all, who put Earp in charge of the communications system which boom out Earp's stern pronouncements but require a hearing aid to listen to the music while eating the meal? Also why are there 8 entrances to the building but the only one that can be used is the one that Wyatt Earp Smith sanctions? Also the music that Alumnus Earp plays in the Student Center would appeal probably most of all to the class of '58. Well enough ink wasted, for all will probably be a futile effort and won't go much beyond the room we now so gratefully occupy. Another L.V.C. step forward and two backward.

The chapel attendance policy is now based on the student's honor. The programs include not only Tuesday morning chapel services but also lectures, plays, concerts, and faculty recitals. Such performers as the Alpha-Omega players and the Light Company are included in the Tuesday morning programs.

Art

The Art Department has seen a few changes this year. The acquisition of a studio will allow the department to offer courses in various areas of art. Mr. Iskowitz also hopes to develop a curriculum for majors. At present, the emphasis of art courses is the appreciation and the understanding of the art forms. In addition to the visual classroom presentation, the students' learning is given further reinforcement through a yearly print exhibit from Roden Galleries.

Mr. Iskowitz is assisted by Mr. Batchelor, who teaches the evening courses.

Biology

This tightly-knit department prepares students for professional schools of medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, medical technology, nursing, forestry and marine biology, graduate work, teaching on the secondary level, and lab work in the department of agriculture and other government agencies. After many rigorous hours of lab and many difficult courses, the well-disciplined graduating Biology major can proclaim to the world that he did it "the Marine way."

The Chemistry Department is located in the southern half of the converted shoe factory on the western edge of campus, or is found by following the sensory stimulation of one's external nares. Chemistry students spend countless hours in labs attempting to decipher their instructions and solve the unknown.

The Chemistry Club, under the leadership of Dr. Bailey, has sponsored several programs during the year concerning medical and industrial applications of chemistry.

English

Housed in an old frame homestead, the English office indeed maintains a homey atmosphere as students mingle with professors to chat over a cup of coffee or to discuss course work. The scheduling of classes in the newly renovated seminar room keeps a steady stream of students going in and out of the building, thus promoting a certain camaraderie, particularly among upper-classmen.

Coupled with this fostering of informal faculty-student relationships is the stressing of flexibility within courses. This year's freshman English course was reorganized into various areas of interest, thus permitting choice among students; modern fiction, ancient and modern drama, debate, and stereotypes in American fiction, were some examples. Areas of particular interest to either students or faculty can be explored in the special problems course, a new addition to the upper level offerings.

Besides emphasis on literature and critical writing in the classroom situation, great encouragement is given to creative expressions in writing and drama outside the classroom. Construction of the Little Theater has boosted interest in dramatics. Students and faculty attended off-campus dramatic productions in the annual trip to the Shakespeare theater in Stratford, Connecticut, and made frequent excursions to nearby films and poetry readings, this year's highlight being W. H. Auden's reading at Swarthmore.

According to tradition the members of Dr. Geffen's American History class took their annual historical walking tour of Philadelphia. Students of Political Science courses subscribed to the world-renowned New York Times.

Mathematics

The department of mathematics prepares students for careers in several fields of applied science or industry. Training is offered for secondary education, pre-engineering, and actuarial science. The department offers courses for students majoring in other departments as well as preparing majors for graduate studies. The Math Club supplies additional stimulation for math majors.

Music

A brownstone building on the corner of Sheridan Avenue succumbed to the ball of a crane and the music department moved to a temporary home: an old Church on White Oak Street. This is a time for change in the music department that will be felt by all its members. There will be fond memories of the old building for all, but there will also be the anticipation of the new building with its soundproof practice rooms and electric pianos.

The music department strives to train teachers and performers ready to meet the demands of a changing world.

Concert Choir

The 1971-1972 year for the LVC Concert Choir was highlighted by its trip to Washington, D.C. to participate in the annual Pageant of Peace Christmas ceremony, presided over by Vice President Agnew. Under the direction of Dr. Pierce A. Getz, the choir also headed south this year giving concerts at Duke University, Washington and Lee College, and Randolph Macon College, and made a special flight to Atlanta, Georgia to sing at the United Methodist Annual Conferences. Other concerts held in the area included a recording session for NBC and the performance of Leonard Bernslein's Chichester Psalm for the Spring Arts Festival.

Orchestra

The Lebanon Valley College Orchestra this year has increased in size. Including both students and faculty, the orchestra rehearses on Mondays at 7pm and on Wednesdays at 3pm. This year the orchestra was busy with its traditional concert presented November 21. On December 14 the group accompanied the College Chorus in excerpts from Handel's Messiah. The orchestra gave their annual performance in the Spring Festival held April 30.

Marching Band

Approximately 110 musicians under the direction of Dr. James Thurmond comprised the marching band. Donald Reinecker was drum major for the 1971-1972 season while Ronald Renshaw served as drill master.

Philosophy

A one man department headed by Mr. W. Thompson, the Philosophy department, serves the Valley by helping students fulfill their Humanities requirements. Mr. Thompson is assisted by Dean Ehrhart who had taught in the department before assuming his role as Dean of the College. Although the number of Philosophy majors is small, this year the campus saw the department offer campus-wide speakers.

Physics

Although the Physics department at the Valley is small, classes are large with the majority of the members hailing from the other science departments to fulfill the required physics courses.

Psychology

The teamwork of Davidon, Love, Stare and Mather ably fulfills the needs of the students. Many of the psychology courses provide a sound background in preparation for graduate studies and for careers in other fields such as medicine, teaching, and business. As part of the course requirements, the clinical classes go to Harrisburg State Hospital and Wernersville State Hospital for in-service training. Some education psych students aid with a class for the mentally retarded.

Religion

The LVC Religion Department's goal is to provide an opportunity for the academic study of the meaning of man's religious experience.

General requirements of six semester hours of Religion now can be met by a) Religion 12 and 13 or b) Religion 12 or 13, and Religion 22 or 42. In addition, basic professional courses are offered to students preparing for the Christian ministry, the world mission field, the teaching of religion, and other church vocations.

Delta Tau Chi is an organization composed of students who have decided to devote full-time to church vocations. DTC conducts evening devotion services which are held in the Chapel narthex. Activities this year consisted of deputations to area churches, programs at the United Methodist senior citizens' home, and participating in local activities of Campus Life.

Sociology

Lebanon Valley College is just beginning to feel the presence of the Sociology Department under the direction of Dr. E. Berson and Mr. E. White. The department has sponsored two world-renowned guest lecturers, Dr. Ino Rossi and Dr. Stephen Klineberg. A seminar for high school students was held in April with sociology majors conducting workshops on various current topics. It is hoped that this seminar will become an annual event.

The goal of the intramural program is to have fun while competing. The secondary goal for each organization is to retire the supremacy trophy. This past year (70-71) Kalo won the supremacy for the third time, thus retiring it. This year the competition is fierce as everyone is trying to win the new trophy.

John Rados

The Student Council functions on two levels. First the Council is a clearing center for student complaints. This year Council sponsored open meetings with Mr. Smith concerning disagreements with College Center Policy and meetings with President Sample concerning campus-wide problems. The second function of Council is that of social organizer. Council assumed this role more actively than in previous years by sponsoring dances throughout the year, a most successful Alice Cooper concert at Homecoming, and the Steve Miller Band. New spirit was added to Homecoming with Council encouraging decorating of dorms and floats. The traditional Christmas Dinner-Dance was renewed by the sponsorship of Council dance and dorm decoration contest.

Gamma Sigma Sigma

The Beta Chi chapter of Gamma Sigma Sigma is Valley's only national sorority. Dedicated to the service of others, Gamma Sponsors several projects which include providing Girl Scout leaders and assistants, tutoring for special and elementary students, sending packages to Vietnam, serving Coffee Hour, visiting their grandmother, Mrs. Ziegler at the UCC home, ushering for Wig and Buckle productions, sponsoring Boost Parties for underprivileged children, and collecting coupons and labels for a heart and respiratory hospital. Sisters must provide ten hours of service time per semester.

Kappa Lambda Nu

North College is the home of Clio. Although all its members do not live in the house it still retains the spirit of a sorority house.

Clio members provide a welcome sight to many industrious students on Tuesday and Thursday evenings when they sell hoagies in the dorms. Clio girls also visit their "grandmother" at the Lebanon Valley Home. The group provides a basket of food for a needy family at Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter.

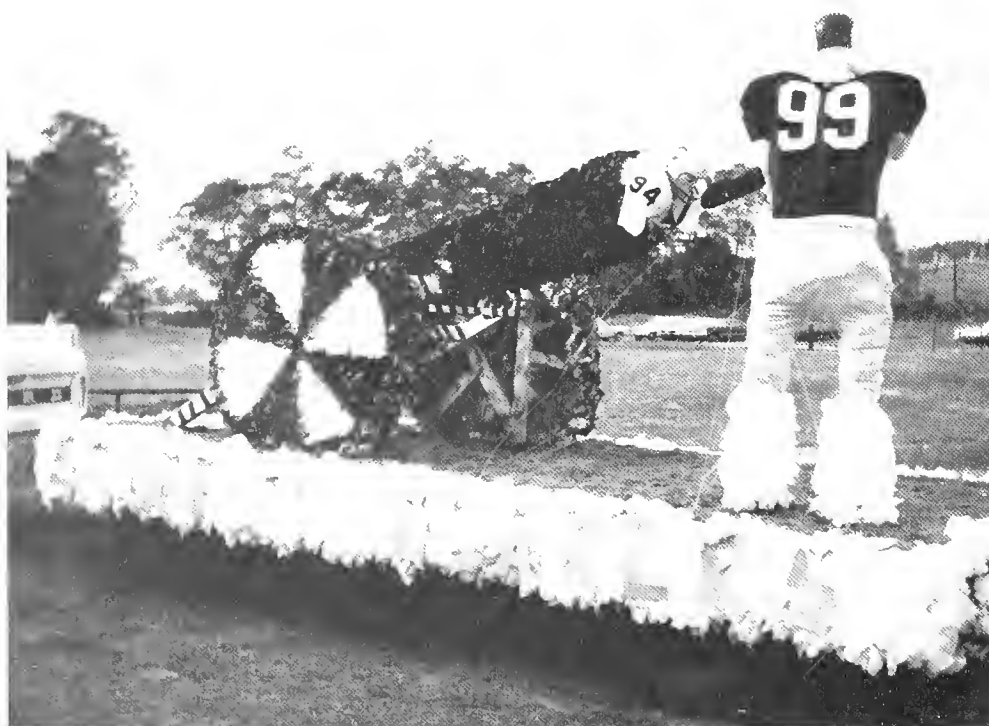

Not to be excluded from the Valley's social life, Clio sponsors a Spring weekend for its members and holds "Open House" several times throughout the year.

Kappa Lambda Sigma

Kalo is dedicated to two aims — the development of the common bond of brotherhood and improvement of campus social life. Kalo contributes much to the college community. Brothers sell mums, run the concession stand at home football games, award the annual outstanding player trophy at the homecoming game and hold numerous parties. Other activities which help to generate brotherhood are competitive in the intramural program and the annual Stag Day. Last year Kalo retired the supremacy trophy by winning it for the third year in a row. Along with Stag Day, the highlight of the Kalo year is the Kalo Spring Weekend.

Knights of the Valley

The Knights of the Valley is a social fraternity dedicated to the ideals of brotherhood among its members. The majority of the brothers reside in Sheridan Hall. Included in the ideals of the Knights' organization are participation and leadership in campus organizations and government, enthusiastic participation in college intramurals, striving for high academic achievement, and above all an outstanding pride in the principles of brotherhood among the members.

The Knights operate the Gordan-Davis Linen Exchange which supplies students with fresh linen each week, and the Kingsley Brown Dry Cleaning franchise in order to raise money for its activities.

Some of these activities include an annual spring dinner-dance and party held for the brothers and returning alumni, trips to see the Hershey Bears' hockey games, the Philadelphia '76'ers, bowling, and occasional parties.

The Hearth Room

*Dine In The Gracious Atmosphere
Inspired By The Warmth Of Our Hearth*

hearth/harth at a brick, stone or cement area of floor in front of a fireplace; b: the floor of a fireplace or of a brick oven on which a fire may be built.

Webster's Dictionary "tells it like it is" in the above definition of a hearth, but certainly the words do little to convey what the hearth really meant, and still means, to civilization. Today as in the past it signifies security, warmth, togetherness, love, family, good fun and good food . . . nourishment for the spirit as well as the body.

Indeed the hearth has been and still is literally the soul of the home.

Is it any wonder we are proud of our hearth and want to share its sense of well-being with you. Come to "The Hearth Room" often and let us show you how we honor every good thought the word "hearth" conveys.

This yearbook was a learning process filled with frustrations and fun.

Last Spring the Student Council voted to open the yearbook staff to members of all classes and designated that the year would be the year of publications. Hence this year's book is again a 1972 Quittie and our staff is composed of members from all four classes.

A Special Thanks:

Diane Walmer, our business manager, who raised a fantastic amount of money in a very short length of time

Mr. James Bowman, our adviser

Jack and Keith, photographers from P.P.S., Inc.

John Rudiak, Cheryl Kirk, Martin Hauserman, Glen Taylor, our student photographers

Rick, for his valuable typing and comic relief

Mr. Ed Patrick, our yearbook representative
